Duke vetoes '88 admit studies

By Paula Ray Christiansen
Daily staff writer

Gov. George Deukmejian vetoed legislation Wednesday aimed at guaranteeing freshmen an equal opportunity to fulfill new CSU admissions requirements for 1988.

Kerri Johnson, California State Student Association liaison to the California State University board of trustees, expressed "extreme disappointment and outrage" that the governor did not pass the bill by Assemblywoman Gloria Molina, D-Los Angeles.

Assembly Bill 3496 would provide for further research into programs and cost factors that will affect high schools' ability to offer the required courses to potential CSU students.

CSSA, a lobby group for CSU students, does not believe the board of trustees did enough studies before passing the new admission standards last November, said Sherri Skelley, legislative director for CSSA.

The new requirements will be phased in over the next five years, said George Hutchinson, CSU acting associate dean for affirmative action. The full impact of these standards will be felt in 1992, he said.

"The admission requirements are going to happen... We were not successful in lobbying the CSU, we were not effective in the Legislature," Johnson said.

The CSSA's major concern is that all high schools in the state may not be able to afford to offer the courses students will need to attend CSU schools, Johnson said.

"We are all devastated. A lot of time and effort went into creating this bill with Gloria (Molina)," Johnson said.

Johnson said she believes a lot of the problem lies in disorganization within MEChA and the Third World Coalition group, which both represent minority groups in high schools and universities throughout the state.

"They are well-informed groups with great goals, but they cannot coalesce among themselves," she said, See VETO, back page

Commuters will scramble Monday as construction closes 450 spaces

By David Rickard
Daily staff writer

An estimated 450 parking spaces on campus will be closed Sunday night to clear the way for two major construction projects.

Four parking lots on East San Carlos Street between Seventh and Ninth streets will be fenced off to allow preliminary work to begin on the Student Union Recreation and Events Center, said Randall Russ, project manager for Roebelen Engineering, Inc.

Closure of lots 7, 8, 9 and 13 will eliminate approximately 400 spots, mostly used by employees, disabled and night students.

Another 50 spaces next to the Engineering Building, mostly used by administrators and disabled students, will be lost when work begins on the $38 million renovation project, said Barbara Pluta, SJSU design and construction manager.

Trailers will be moving onto the field between Seventh Street and the old Women's Gym today and during the weekend, Russ said.

Twenty-five spaces on the west side of the street already have been cordoned off to make room for the trailers.

Russ was unable to give dates for the closure of Eighth Street between San Carlos and San Salvador streets — which accommodates 80 cars — and the east side of Seventh Street, between San Carlos and the Music Building, which has 25 spots.

The timetable for shutdown of the two streets depends on the progress of the construction, Russ said.

Henry Orbach, SJSU director of Traffic and Parking Operations, said he thinks that any confusion resulting from the loss of parking will be temporary.

"There might be some problems for a couple of days, but things will fall into place," Orbach said. "I think what you're going to see is not a major problem, but a major realignment."

Faculty members and students should consider alternatives to commuting in their own cars, Orbach said.

"Remember county transit, remember the park-and-ride lots, remember car pooling," Orbach said. "We'll help people any way we can."

Pluta said she is uncertain whether the portion of Seventh Street between the Music Building and Clark

Homecoming game crucial for Spartans

Win over Bulldogs could mean PCAA title

By Greg Stryker
Daily staff writer

The game will have much more meaning than a homecoming when SJSU (2-2) takes on Fresno State (3-0) tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. at Spartan Stadium.

Although this is only the first PCAA game for both clubs, it could have quite an impact on who will win the conference title. Fresno is currently ranked 18th in the nation.

"The winner of this game can take a giant stride toward the league championship," Spartan head coach Claude Gilbert said. "It won't ensure the winner is in, or the loser is out. But it will give one of us a great leg up toward the conference championship."

SJSU cornerback K.C. Clark said he considers it the Spartans' most important game of the season.

"For me this game is as key a game as it can get," Clark said.

"We're looking at it like a championship game. To me, I think whoever wins this game is going to win the conference."

The game will feature an aerial battle between SJSU's Mike Perez and the Bulldogs' Kevin Sweeney, who rank first and fourth, respectively, in the nation in total offense.

Perez has posted some big numbers this season. He leads the nation in total offense with an average of 308.5 yards per game, and he's thrown for 1,207 yards and completed 56.4 percent of his passes.

"I think the guy we have to deal with is Perez," said Bulldog head coach Jim Sweeney, Kevin's father. "He's an outstanding quarterback. He's made San Jose a multi-dimensional football team, because now they have a balance between the run and the pass."

The Bulldog coach's son is no slouch either.

The senior quarterback is a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate. He has averaged 286 yards in total offense and is a definite threat to throw deep.

Facts and figures on Sweeney: • His 9,195 career passing yards are only 16 shy of Chuck Long's total for the number No. 6 spot on the all-time NCAA passing list.

Program board members given pay raise

By Amy L. Pabalan
Daily staff writer

The Associated Students board of directors on Wednesday approved a stipend increase for the members of the A.S. Program Board.

The seven program board chairmen will now receive $75 per month and the board's director will receive a monthly stipend of $350, which will equal the A.S. board's stipends.

The pay hike for the program board comes from $32,550 in unappropriated A.S. funds from the 1985-86 fiscal year, A.S. Controller Gabriel Miramontes said.

Miramontes presented to the A.S. board a proposal to allocate the unappropriated funds, which the board accepted. The plan appropriated funds to the general fund reserve, revenue sharing, emergency fund, special allocation, program board stipends and the university's satellite campus, Monterey Peninsula.

"I was confident that the board would approve it," Miramontes said. "I was able to explain to most of the board members what the proposal was about."

Verda Alexander, A.S. Program Board director, said she had voiced her concern when the A.S. board approved a pay raise for its members this summer and questioned why program board members did not also get a raise.

"I am pleased that my chairs are getting an extra $25, because I thought the gap (between program board and A.S. board stipends) was wide," she said.

A.S. President Tom Boothe said the A.S. board overlooked the possibility of giving the program board members a pay raise during last year's budget process.

"It was an oversight on the part of the board," Boothe said. "In the past year when it was reviewing the setting of stipends, it unintentionally overlooked the program board. Some of the program board members took offense and felt slighted."

Turkish dance troupe to perform tomorrow

By Marj Martin
Daily staff writer

Steeped in folklore dating back to the Byzantine Empire, the Turkish Folklore Club's dances send audiences on a flight of fancy to that exotic and misunderstood land between Asia and Europe.

The club will dance tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Concert Music Hall of the Music Building. The exhibition will consist of a selection of folk dances first performed at Expo '86 this summer.

The campus club was the only Turkish group at the World's Fair in Vancouver, B.C. and one of only two dance groups from California, said Omer Uyuklu, the club's staff adviser.

The club's membership includes a variety of ages and nationalities. Ranging from 19 to 55, there is a core of 10 Turkish dancers, plus Japanese, German and other nationalities represented.

This broad cross section is possible because San Jose has such a diverse population, Uyuklu said.

The campus is a mixture of nationalities, just as Uyuklu's homeland is a mixture. Throughout history, Turkey has been occupied by almost every major political power on earth, Uyuklu said.

The Balkan nation has become a miniature melting pot for not only Greeks and Turks but others as well, Uyuklu said.

As a young engineering student at a Turkish university, Uyuklu and a few other engineering students founded a folklore study group. An artistic outlet in the beginning, this group soon became a serious endeavor, he said.

"We ended up doing major research, the kind you could use for a master's thesis in a folklore department," Uyuklu said.

When he became a student at SJSU in 1977, Uyuklu founded the campus Turkish Folklore Club on much the same lines as his former Turkish student group.

He said he brought to San Jose extensive knowledge of the dances and costumes of 13 regions in the Balkans.

Uyuklu said that the club has two goals, one to perform and the other to explain through the art of dance that all the nations of Eastern Europe are united in a common culture.

Conflict in the Balkans is purely political, he said. "Turkey is secular, not like other Arab countries. There are both Moslems and other religions side by side," Uyuklu said. "It is very important that (the Turkish Folklore Club) is associated with all the ethnic groups in Turkey."

The performers believe, as does Uyuklu, that dance is a key to ethnic understanding, said the club's vice president, Ed Webb.

Surprise yourself, see the Spartans

The time has come for us to really support the Spartan football team.

There are no excuses now. We have a good team, with hopes of winning the PCAA and making it to the California Bowl.

Tomorrow's contest against 18th-ranked Fresno State is the key.

SJSU students, faculty, alumni and the community must show their support by attending the game.

There is no doubt we can fill Spartan Stadium to its 30,000-seat capacity and show the Bulldog's "Red Wave" that we are serious about football in San Jose.

In the past it has been an embarrassment to San Jose that it seemed there were more Fresno State fans at the games here than SJSU fans.

In 1984 the Spartans beat the Bulldogs, 18-17, on a two-point conversion late in the game, but only 17,047 watched that victory.

This semester, we had a near-record crowd of 23,115 for the Oregon game. Tomorrow's game against Fresno is much more important, not to mention the fact that the athletic budget could use the money.

If good football is not enough reason to attend the game, then the fact that it's homecoming is.

This could be the biggest football game to hit San Jose since 1981 when SJSU beat Fresno State 65-33 at Spartan Stadium and went on to play in the California Bowl.

It was just four weeks ago that everyone thought the Spartans would be 0-5 after the Fresno game. Now we have a chance to be 3-2.

The football team has proven to us that they deserve respect, let's show them that we are thankful of their efforts.

Let high school students into shows

Cutting out the teen market? Most businessmen would gag at such a thought — especially when the teen market is the only market that counts. However, President Gail Fullerton has done just that.

The cash-carrying, under-18, non-student teen scene will not be allowed to enter any of the Associated Students Program Board's concerts in Morris Dailey Auditorium and in the Student Union.

SJSU relies heavily on the influx of local high school students to fill its classes each fall. As a result of Fullerton's decision to bar youngsters from the concerts, the university will eventually suffer.

These kids are influenced by the extracurricular activities the university has to offer in addition to the academic program. SJSU doesn't have to try to compete with Bill Graham, but should realize these programs influence high school students when it's time to decide on an university.

In addition, the program board will lose funds which could further attract big-name acts. These acts depend on the teen market as well as college students to buy albums and put band members' faces on teen-magazine covers.

Fullerton's rationalization is unruly mobs will leave gum under the seats and Cokes on the floor — not to mention potential legal liability, if youngsters should happen to fall down.

It's very likely to happen. But there are plenty of people over 18 who chew gum, spill Coke and fall down all the time.

Just because individuals are under 18 does not make them unruly or irresponsible. Most of these kids just want to see bands and have a good time. There aren't too many clubs or places to go when you are that age, except to see a movie. The university could benefit by offering some of these individuals an alternative place to spend $6.

Issue: Does SJSU need a student government?

Pro

A.S. does more than people think

Getting rid of the Associated Students would be like getting a paper cut for many students. At first they may not notice, but soon enough, it'll really sting.

However, unlike a little paper cut that will heal and go away, ridding the student body of the its only vehicle of unified representation would be more like cutting off a limb — a limb that supplies numerous services as a primary benefit but also acts as a collective voice for students.

Student apathy is rampant on this campus and many may not even know what functions the A.S. serves. Students may not even know they pay a fee to the governing student body. But they still may use the check-cashing service, attend the Wednesday Night Cinema, join clubs, or attend the program board's concerts.

Some complain that the speakers which A.S. provides ostracize many students, and these speakers only represent the interests of a few. If the private sector were to bring speakers to campus, the interests of a few would still be represented and the cost to the individual student would be a lot more.

Last year, Hunter S. Thompson, a self-proclaimed doctor of journalism and writer of several novels, spoke at Morris Dailey Auditorium. The most inexpensive seats were $6. If the A.S. hadn't helped to pay for the speaker, tickets would have cost an exorbitant amount for any student on a budget. SJSU doesn't get enough speakers as it is, and if A.S. didn't help provide this service, not many people would be able to afford to see speakers.

If the A.S. didn't allocate funds for any groups on campus, most would not exist. There wouldn't be a Student Union without the A.S. The child care center would not be in existence. The Health Center was once something the A.S. rallied to support.

As a commuter campus, many people may not think they use the services of the A.S., but it would be difficult to graduate from SJSU without using something the A.S. hasn't helped build or establish for students. Buildings such as the Student Union and the Student Union Recreation and Events Center were made possible by A.S. lobbying for a place for students to socialize.

Sue Kiyabu

Changing the structure of the A.S. government is a ridiculous notion that could never come to pass. How would the student body, made up of 25,000 students, make any sort of organized effort when most students don't even know how much they pay for A.S. services.

Only 4 percent of the student population voted in the A.S. elections to raise student fees from $10 to $18. Most students can't even make it to elections. It's highly unlikely the 23,000 students who didn't vote in the election would make an organized effort to change the entire structure of the government.

Some claim that the quality of an institution remains on its reputation as a academic institution and extra-curricular activities should not be a part of the campus. Without the extra-curricular activities such as intramural sports programs, those brick dorm buildings would look more like prison to those who live there.

The student population makes up the majority of the campus. If students pay for the salaries of administrators and instructors it's necessary for students to have a voice on this campus. The administration may not always know what the needs of the students are. If there were no A.S., how would they ever find out?

The A.S. appoints students to seats on boards and committees within the Academic Senate, which directs policy with administrators and faculty. In this way the student voice is represented.

Remember no taxation without representation? The theory applies at this level and should not be altered.

Con

Student concerns aren't addressed

Student government exists as the government and voice of the students. But the form of student government we presently have on campus alienates and excludes a large portion of students through the funding and the extremely complicated election process utilized.

The Associated Students government needs to be radically changed or abolished completely. The A.S. should strive to represent all students on campus, not just specific interest groups whose officers have a personal connection with A.S.

There is no way a student government can represent the needs of 25,000 students. The SJSU student body is a very diverse group with many cultural and political interests. Yet the A.S. collects $18 from every student right off the top from university fees and allocates it to various campus clubs and activities.

There is a lack of student representation in how A.S. funds are spent to bring speakers to campus. Controversial speakers such as self-proclaimed revolutionary Stokely Carmichael and conservative talk show host Wally George brought to campus represent a very small minority of students, yet money collected from all students is used to hire these people.

Funds for these speakers are obtained by partisan student groups requesting money for the event. Paul Romero, a student involved in many campus clubs, said, "If you have friends on the council, you can get funds to bring just about any speaker you want to campus."

Money from the general student fund should not be used for radical speakers on campus. If a club brings a good speaker to campus, then students will pay out of their own pockets and there will be no need to charge uninterested students for a speech they will never hear.

Problems do not stop there. The election process that puts these student politicians into office alienates many students from the elections.

Every year the different political parties on campus rename themselves so students will not associate past policies with present campaigns. Two years ago what was the "Yess" party changed to the "Spark" party last year. The "U.S." party of two years ago changed to the "Real Party" last year. The same people make up these groups but they change the names to protect themselves from past mistakes.

There are more problems with student elections. The primary run-off election process is confusing to say the least. The primary run-off system works very well for a two-party system in which there are many candidates running for one office under a particular party.

When the run-off primary system includes three parties, as it does on campus, the election gets distorted by the student politicians who are running for office. When there is a moderate party and a conservative party running candidates for office and then a self-proclaimed liberal party enters the election, problems of perception arise. The fact that a liberal group identifies itself as a left-oriented group could give the impression that the moderates and conservatives are far more right-wing than they might be. The situation becomes worse when one group accuses the other of being radical.

This adds to the confusion and causes students to become disinterested in campus campaigns. Political apathy among students is bad enough without student politicians scaring potential voters away from elections. Simply stated, the primary election process needs to be ended.

There are many problems with the present form of student government and they must be changed if A.S. is going to be the government and the voice of the people. And if it can't change, then it should be abolished.

Pep talk

Attention: Upon completion of this column you will have only 3 1/2 days to register to vote in the upcoming election so it therefore behooves you to proceed to the nearest voter-registration location and let your voice be heard.

Ready team? As Americans, we are given the responsibility to personally plot the course we desire this nation to take by voting.

This nation exists only because its people allow it to and continually work toward its preservation. We are a great nation because of this and because we as Americans have a role in deciding the direction our nation is to take, we are responsible for its good points as well as its bad.

Most people understand this conceptually from civics class, but few believe that one individual can have an impact on the nation.

This leads to the lowest voter turnout in the western world as well as to leaders and legislation not representative of the American public.

There are a great many complaints against the way the government is or is not running the country. There is, however, no movement at the polls to change anything which may mean that those who are complaining the loudest are not voicing their opinions on Election Day.

This is both irresponsible and illogical and must stop if America is going to keep its form of representative democracy.

Many constitutional scholars point to voter apathy as a case for abandoning representative democracy and adopting a parliamentary form of government.

Anyone who has observed most of the European nations operate or who has seen the Israeli Knesset totter on the brink of collapse because of a foreign policy debate will realize that the system we now have in America is the one for us.

Regardless of your views on candidates or issues, the only vote that does not count is the one never cast.

The registration process is simple and relatively painless; pick up a form, fill it out and mail it in.

On campus: at a registration booth set up between the Art Building and the Student Union or at the Associated Students government office on the third floor of the Union on the east side.

Elsewhere: post offices, public libraries, fire stations, city and county offices, 7-Eleven stores and Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream parlors.

There are other places, but these seem to be the most identifiable and accessible to students.

If you cannot get to the previously mentioned places, call the Registrar of Voters at 298-7400 for more information on where to pick up a form.

All you have to do is fill out the form and mail it to the Registrar of Voters, 1553 Berger Drive, San Jose, before Monday night. Anything postmarked after that time will make the person ineligible for the Nov. 4 election.

As an American you have a responsibility to vote that came with your birth. Do not become one of the apathetic citizens who complains about his country, but is unwilling to take an active part in its governance.

Registering to vote is a vote for the democratic system in America.

Senate overrides presidential veto; enacts sanctions against South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 78-21 yesterday to override President Reagan's veto of tough new sanctions against South Africa, joining the House in enacting measures designed to force Pretoria's white-minority government to abandon apartheid.

In dealing Reagan one of the most dramatic foreign policy setbacks of his presidency, and the first substantive override of a Reagan veto, the Senate rebuffed administration pleas that the punitive economic sanctions would prove most harmful to South Africa's blacks. Five previous Reagan vetoes, on lesser issues, had been reversed.

Despite fierce lobbying by Reagan and other White House officials, and members of the Senate supportive of the administration's policy, the final vote showed the president falling 13 votes short of the 34 needed to sustain the veto.

Forty-seven Democrats and 31 Republicans voted to override Reagan, while 21 GOP lawmakers voted to back Reagan.

In a statement issued from the White House, Reagan said that despite his objections to the measure, "Our administration will, nevertheless implement the law. It must be recognized, however, that this will not solve the serious problems that plague that country."

The House had voted 313-83 Monday to override Reagan's veto.

While the newly enacted sanctions stop short of ordering outright American disinvestment, and do not call for a complete trade embargo, they do take several significant steps intended to bring pressure on Pretoria.

As a first step, the legislation bans new investment and new bank loans.

It also bars the importation into the United States of South African steel, iron, coal, uranium, agricultural products, food, arms, ammunition and military vehicles. And it transfers the South African sugar quota to the Philippines.

The measure puts an end to direct air transportation between South Africa and the United States, abrogates U.S. landing rights for South African aircraft and terminates the air services agreement now in effect between the two countries.

Certain exports to South Africa also are now banned, including petroleum products, nuclear material and data and certain computers.

In the days preceding the final actions by Congress, Reagan had offered to put more teeth in sanctions his administration has imposed last year. Reagan said, "Today's Senate vote should not be viewed as the final chapter in America's efforts, along with our allies, to address the plight of the people of South Africa."

"Now is the time for South Africa's government to act with courage and good sense to avert a crisis... There is still time for orderly change and peaceful reform. South Africans of good will, black and white, should seize the moment."

In the debate just before the vote, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., pleaded with his colleagues to support Reagan, and denounced the position taken by supporters of the new sanctions as "a feel-good foreign policy."

But Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., declared it an "affirmation of the American dream."

Man apologizes for anti-Prop 65 ad

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An actor who appeared on an anti-Proposition 65 television ad announced yesterday he was sorry he did it, and came out for the proposition.

"I support safe drinking water and I am definitely voting yes on 65," said Dan Leegant, who plays a farmer in two anti-65 TV spots. "The opposition advertisements are misleading and I'm sorry I ever agreed to appear in them."

Proposition 65, one of five initiatives on the November ballot, would force the state to publish a list of chemicals determined to cause cancer or birth problems and ban businesses or farmers from knowingly putting any of the chemicals on that list into sources of drinking water.

Both spots show Leegant, as a farmer, complaining that Proposition 65 prevents him from using "bug spray" and "a long list of other things," but does not apply to his neighbor. At the end of the ad, he opens a barn door to reveal his neighbor, the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant.

Leegant said at a Capitol news conference, sponsored by the Yes on 65 people, that he took the job for an $800 fee without investigating the initiative, but that his agent assured him it was all right.

While filming the spot near Rancho Seco, he said, he overheard a newspaper reporter saying that Barbara Streisand and Henry Winkler, and other "people I identified with," were for it, and chemical companies and farmers were against it.

"But it was too late for me to get out," he said.

Leegant, who said he considers himself "a fairly political person," said he became "upset, frustrated and angry." He wrote a letter to the Yes on 65 people volunteering his services and they asked him to appear at the news conference. He cannot make a television ad for them because his contract with the No on 65 people forbids it, he said.

Belly embezzlement

Feds recover $200,000 in casino loot

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Nearly $200,000 allegedly embezzled from a Nevada casino was recovered when U.S. Customs agents stopped a woman — who appeared to be pregnant — but really had a pillowcase full of cash and gold strapped to her body, officials said.

Linda A. Mendenhall, 38, of Sparks, Nev., and her husband, William D. Mendenhall, 35, of Reno, appeared Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Spokane on federal charges of unlawfully transporting currency and making false statements to customs officers.

The two, held by U.S. marshals, also were sought on warrants issued from Sparks charging grand larceny, embezzlement and possession of stolen property, officials said.

Sgt. Dave Zarubi of the Sparks Police Department said a routine audit of Karl's Silver Club casino finances on Aug. 30 showed $200,000 was missing from the vaults.

That same day, Linda Mendenhall had called in sick from her job as the casino accounting department's vault supervisor. A warrant was issued for the Mendenhalls' arrest three days later.

Customs spokeswoman Maryanne Noonan said the couple tried to cross into north-central Washington from Canada this past Friday when inspectors noticed their car was mentioned on an alert list of the National Crime Information Center.

Noonan said Mendenhall "appeared to be extremely bulky," and was then patted down. Officials found a pillowcase containing currency, gold coins and gold bars, valued at $183,387, strapped to her midsection, Noonan said.

Unwanted AIDS infants to be cared for by monastery

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Unwanted infants born with AIDS who otherwise might spend their brief lives in hospitals may get a sample of heaven on Earth at a mountaintop monastery that has offered to take them in.

"We believe that in the few months they have after birth and before the disease takes them, there is time for these babies to feel the leaves and see the sun," said Brother Toby McCarroll of the Starcross Monastery.

The Roman Catholic monastery, located on 115 acres about 80 miles north of San Francisco, will take up to four infants with the disease and would help find homes for up to 20 others.

Starcross is completely self-sufficient, supporting itself by maintaining a small milking herd, nurturing gardens and selling Christmas trees and wreaths.

Five adults, a 16-year-old foster child and one healthy adopted infant live there now. McCarroll said the monastery has taken care of 15 children with special medical and emotional needs in the past.

When Starcross member Sister Marti read about AIDS-infected babies last March, they decided to investigate the possibility of taking in some of those infants, McCarroll said.

Campus Crimes

San Jose police arrested a suspect Monday in connection with the theft of a $1,500 gold necklace.

Police stopped Dejon Rene Lawton, 19, at 10th and William streets because he fit the description of the suspect that has been tearing gold chains off women's necks in the university area, University police Chief Lew Schatz said.

About 12 women in the area have had chains stolen.

A vehicle with a stolen permit was towed by the UPD this week. The unidentified student will either be reprimanded by the dean's office, or the UPD can take legal action, Schatz said.

A car owned by a secretary of SJSU had its employee parking sticker stolen at an unknown location in San Jose, she reported. The value of the semester employee sticker is $71.

A jacket, backpack and its contents worth $244 were taken from the Student Union Ballroom on Sept. 25. The student left the backpack at 4:45 p.m. and when the student returned at 7 p.m., it was gone.

An auto bra was stolen from a car in the Seventh Street parking garage on Sept. 25. The value was $50.

A crystal glass paperweight and a digital desk clock were taken from the desk of an office on the second floor of Wahlquist Library Central on Sept. 24. The value of the items was $77.

A vending machine on the first floor of Dwight Bentel Hall was broken into sometime after Sept. 19. Money taken from the candy machine totaled $110.

Campus Crimes was compiled by Daily staff writer Oscar Guerra.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said the vote sent this message to South Africa's white rulers: "Stop the killing, stop the violence before it tears your great nation asunder."

But Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., asked, "What kind of government will South Africa end up with? Will it be freedom and democracy, or will it be tyranny? This legislation makes a decisive choice for tyranny."

In advance of the vote, Democratic leaders had predicted that the Senate would override Reagan's veto.

The furious lobbying of senators in the last hours included a telephone call to the Senate cloakroom by South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha — a move that enlivened debate at the end.

An uproar erupted over the propriety and legality of Botha's role in telling four senators that his country would cease purchases of U.S. grain if the Senate nullified the Reagan vote.

And some conservatives sharply criticized the role of Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in fighting for the sanctions bill and for opposing Reagan on the override issue.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, said he was beginning an inquiry into Botha's call.

The foreign minister made his appeal to senators called off the floor by Helms.

Mathias said through a spokesman that he wanted to determine whether the call Wednesday afternoon violated the Logan Act, which forbids direct negotiations between members of Congress and foreign officials.

Bradley attacks Duke on coastal protection

Labels panel pro-development

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tom Bradley, capturing endorsements yesterday from three major environmental groups, accused Gov. George Deukmejian of stacking the California Coastal Commission with anti-environmentalists and attempting to abolish the decade-old panel.

The four-term Democratic mayor of Los Angeles, on the first leg of a two-day, statewide campaign tour, said the commission under Deukmejian "has been decimated, both in terms of its budget, as well as its staff." Bradley said his Republican opponent wants "to abolish the Coastal Commission and, if he had the votes (in the Legislature), he'd do it tomorrow."

The commission, 10 years old Monday, has 12 voting members who regulate development along California's 1,100 miles of coastline. It's been criticized by real estate and construction industry interests for blocking legitimate development and has been a target of Deukmejian budget cuts since he took office in 1983. Its staff has been reduced from 171 when he took office to the current level of 117.

Bradley accused Deukmejian of "placing on that commission the kind of people who are his representatives (and) who are not sensitive to the needs of protecting the environment." Bradley vowed to appoint environmentalists to the panel if elected, "and I think you're going to see quite different votes coming out of that commission."

He also called for "coastal preservation zones" similar to "marine sanctuaries" to assist the commission in protecting the coast, prohibition on ocean waste incineration and a moratorium on offshore oil development.

Bradley made the comments to environmentalists after receiving endorsements from Friends of the River, the Sierra Club and the California League of Conservation Voters.

Deukmejian, who planned a northern California campaign swing through Santa Rosa and Oakville later yesterday, was not immediately available for comment. Spokesman Kevin Brett said Bradley "has no credibility whatsoever to discuss the subject of sensitivity to the environment. The mayor has failed to protect the 45 miles of the Los Angeles city coastline."

Brett called Bradley "the state's largest polluter... as a result of the discharge of thousands of gallons of waste into Santa Monica Bay."

Brett also said the Coastal Commission missed deadlines in 1981 and 1984 to complete local planning reports.

The 68-year-old Bradley faces an uphill battle in his campaign for the governorship, trailing Deukmejian by a six- to nine-point margin in the latest statewide polls and lagging decisively in fund raising. The Nov. 4 election is an unprecedented rematch of the same candidates for governor.

Councilman admits he abused city credit card

SAN DIEGO (AP) — City Councilman Uvaldo Martinez pleaded guilty yesterday to two felony charges stemming from the alleged abuse of a city-issued credit card to wine and dine friends and associates.

As part of a plea bargain, Martinez agreed to resign from office before his Nov. 13 sentencing.

He pleaded guilty to single counts of misappropriating public funds and filing a false expense statement with the city during the hearing before Superior Court Judge Barbara Gamar.

A city council member since 1982, Martinez is the second city official to face ouster after being convicted of a felony.

Former Mayor Roger Hedgecock resigned shortly before his sentencing last December on a perjury and conspiracy conviction related to campaign finance violations.

The councilman was charged with 24 felony counts related to the use of the card while claiming city business was being conducted.

Federal doctors concerned about Rx drug abuse

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal health officials are worried that America's "other drug problem" — the taking of prescribed medications incorrectly or not at all — may be causing tens of thousands of deaths each year.

Dr. Robert E. Windom, the Reagan administration's top health official, said yesterday up to half of the 1.6 billion medicines prescribed to Americans each year are taken improperly.

He said one study indicated that 125,000 people die each year from failure to take their medicines for cardiovascular disease.

"The toll in mental disorientation, in physical effects and even in terms of life and death, may be just as great when a 70-year-old woman takes her blood pressure medicine improperly as when her grandson smokes marijuana or takes a street drug," said Dr. Frank E. Young, the commissioner of food and drugs.

The two federal officials joined former congressman Paul G. Rogers at a news conference to launch a campaign to encourage patients to get more information about the medicines they take and to prod physicians and other health care providers to give correct answers. They designated October "Talk About Prescriptions" month.

Rogers is chairman of the non-profit National Council on Patient Information and Education, which is spearheading the drive.

They said the public should ask these questions whenever they get a prescription:

- What is the name of the drug and what is it supposed to do?
- How and when do I take it, and for how long?
- What foods, drinks, other medicines or activities should I avoid while taking this drug?
- Are there any side effects, and what do I do if they occur?
- Is there any written information available about the drug?

The federal health officials said some people take the wrong dosage of their medicines, many prematurely stop taking them and others don't take them at all.

Windom, the Department of Health and Human Service's assistant secretary for health, said crack, cocaine and other illegal drugs all pose serious problems for American society, but so does "this other drug problem."

More than 10 percent of hospital admissions are related to misuse of prescription drugs, Windom said.

The worst misuse, he said, is when people start feeling better and decide they can dispense with the rest of their pills.

The complications from not following the prescribed course can be especially dangerous for those who are taking medicines to control hypertension — high blood pressure — or arrhythmia, an irregular heart beat, Young said.

Hat trick sparks field hockey win

By Greg Stryker
Daily staff writer

The Spartan field hockey team had two choices in its game against Stanford: lose and fall into last place in the NorPac conference, or win and climb into second.

It chose the latter.

SJSU (2-2), behind a hat trick from freshman forward Sheryl Sorg and an effective defense, beat the defending PCAA champion Cardinal, 3-1, Wednesday at the South Campus field.

Spartan head coach Carolyn Lewis said it was the team's best performance of the season.

"We did everything that we talked about having to do," Lewis said. "We had lots of pressing on the ball, and we had good defense. We shut down their big players."

Stanford head coach Sheryl Johnson said she was also impressed.

"Their entire team played very well today," Johnson said. "They kept our forwards from doing what they normally do."

The Spartans were in control of the game from the outset.

With the game scoreless, SJSU sophomore forward Sharon Cafini ran the ball up the right side, manipulated it through Cardinal defenders, then centered the ball. Freshman forward Sheryl Sorg took the pass and hit it into the open net for her fifth goal of the season at the 8:30 mark.

Three minutes later, Sorg took the ball off penalty corner and hit a rocket shot into the middle of the net past goalkeeper Karen Jones for a 2-0 lead.

Jones came into the game as the conference's leading goalkeeper with a 1.0 goals-per-game average.

Sorg then put the game out of reach seven minutes into the second half, when she found the ball in a scramble and hit the net for a commanding 3-0 lead. Cafini was credited with the assist.

Sorg has now scored all seven of the team's goals this season. Her seven goals lead the conference.

"It's our best complete team effort of the season," Sorg said. "Everybody was playing their strongest. We kept passing it to Sharon on the right side. We concentrated on it in practice."

Freshman forward Gina Donofrio also attributed some of the team's success to practices.

"We've been working on the pass and go a lot," Donofrio said. "We've been working on it specifically because we haven't been scoring enough... and it's finally coming together."

Spartan goalkeeper Jill Jacobson also played well, making nine saves. She lost a shutout when Cardinal forward Laura Gartland blasted a goal at the 32-minute mark of the second half.

"The defense marked really well," Jacobson said. "A couple of their key players were marked right out of the game."

Quarterbacks ready for aerial showdown

• He needs 1,384 yards to break Doug Flutie's all-time mark for passing yards.

• He's the all-time PCAA passing leader.

The Bulldogs have the longest winning streak in nation (11 wins and 15 unbeaten games in a row), but the Fresno State quarterback isn't about to take the Spartans lightly.

"They're 2-2 against Pac-10 teams," the younger Sweeney said. "It's league play now for everybody. We're going to be ready and so is San Jose State."

"San Jose is not a surprise to me. They were a football team last year who was missing a few key people. They're coached by a great man in Claude Gilbert, and he'll get them ready to play."

Each quarterback has a pair of receivers he likes to throw to.

Perez's favorite targets so far this season have been wide receivers Lafo Malaululu and Guy Liggins. Malaululu has caught 26 passes for 334 yards, and Liggins has caught 22 passes for 331 yards.

The Bulldogs' receiving corps features two of the top pass-catchers in the PCAA.

Kevin Sweeney
Bulldog QB

Senior Split end Steven "TD" Baker is a threat every time he catches the football. He's averaging 28.4 yards a reception this season, and he caught touchdown passes of 58 and 49 yards in the Bulldog's 34-10 thrashing of Louisiana Tech.

Senior flanker Gene Taylor is a threat on the other side. Taylor led the Bulldogs in receptions last year, with 30 for 545 yards. This year, he has 12 catches for 156 yards.

The Spartans and their '46' defense will have their hands full. But the Spartan defense has not allowed a 100-yard rushing game yet and is ranked eighth in the nation.

"We have to play by far our best game of the year because this may be the most efficient offense we've played," defensive coordinator Sam Gruneisen said. "We have to get in his (Sweeney's) face. We have to be a little more concerned with the deep route because he throws the deep route better than the other guys we've faced.

"These guys are a little better receivers than we've seen, but if we keep the pressure on him (Sweeney) we'll force them into a shorter game, which will play into our hands."

Fresno State is definitely not a one-dimensional team. Their defense has 30 quarterback sacks in just three games, and junior right defensive end Jethro Franklin has 12 1/2 of them.

The Spartan offensive line has allowed only three sacks in over 180 pass attempts. Senior left guard David Diaz-Infante said the line is ready for Franklin and the rest of the Bulldog defense.

"They have a solid defense, but they haven't gone up against nearly the competition or the offensive linemen that we have," Diaz-Infante said. "They'll pose a tough challenge for us, but we've faced just as good if not better already."

"We're not going to plan anything different for him (Franklin). He's a fast guy who'll try to out-quick us. He's faced some pretty fat, slow offensive linemen. He's going to face a different problem in us."

The Spartan running game broke loose for 210 yards in the 34-13 victory over California. "I think we can run against anybody," Diaz-Infante said.

Gilbert perhaps summed up the game the best.

"Fresno State is the league power and defending champion," Gilbert said. "And, we're playing against a quarterback whose numbers indicate he is one of the most prolific passers in history."

"All these factors add up to offering our team a great incentive."

The Spartans lead the series, 29-21-3. Fresno State won last year, 33-17, in Fresno. The teams have split the last four meetings.

Lawrence Fan, SJSU sports information director, said a crowd larger than that at the Oregon game is expected. The Oregon game attracted 23,115, which was the second-largest crowd in Spartan football history.

Volleyball team to try to bounce back against Cal Poly SLO

By Karin Smail
Daily staff writer

Following a morale-shattering loss Monday night to the San Diego State Aztecs, SJSU volleyball coach Dick Montgomery is working hard at restoring his team's confidence.

The Spartans (10-1) will face a tough Cal Poly San Luis Obispo squad tomorrow night at 7:30 in Spartan Gym.

"Losing to San Diego was a major blow, and it shook our confidence," Montgomery said. "A victory (against SLO) is important, and the game will tell us a lot about where we stand."

"It's not a life or death thing, but we need to reassure ourselves that we still are a very good team."

SJSU is ranked No. 1 in the coaches' poll but will probably drop down in Tuesday's poll as a result of the loss to the Aztecs. The Mustangs, 8-3 overall and 3-2 in the PCAA, are ranked 11th.

It will be interesting to see how the Spartans perform against the Mustangs, especially with Maria Healy still hobbled by a sprained ankle.

Her status is questionable for the match, and while she is on the bench, SJSU is without its top blocker. Healy has averaged 1.47 blocks per game.

SJSU has a score to settle with the Mustangs as well. SLO knocked the Spartans out of the running for the national championship last year, 15-9, 15-5, 15-9, in the regional tournament.

Questions are still being asked as to why the Spartans collapsed in the third game of the Aztec match, when they seemingly had victory in hand.

Montgomery tried to put the loss into perspective.

"A lot of intangibles are involved in why we lost the match — and they aren't easy to put a finger on," Mont-

"A victory is important, and the game will tell us a lot about where we stand."

— Dick Montgomery,
SJSU volleyball coach

gomery said. "After losing that third game, we just couldn't stay with them (the Aztecs). Once they began controlling the tempo of the game they were the better team, and we just couldn't stay with them."

Montgomery said the worst aspect of the loss is the fact that SJSU was so dominant in the first two games, and then just fell apart.

"We would much rather have had SDS kick our butts from the start than to lose the way we did," he said. "We were fully expecting to walk away with the win because of the way the first two games went. It was just one or two plays that we failed to convert that was the basis of our failure."

"Heck, even SDS's coach couldn't believe what happened. He came up to me after the match and said that after the way we'd played the first two games, he was hoping that his team would at least make it a challenge for us in the third game, and then they end up winning."

Montgomery said the way to approach the rest of the season is to remember that no one team member can do it alone.

"We need to be a team — six players as one," he said. "What happened in the SDS game was that once we fell behind, we lost the concept of playing as a team, and we began playing as individuals."

"We can't be ranked in the top three or four in the nation and base our performance on one player — that's the key. But we also have to stick to one tempo during a match."

Montgomery said it's hard to change the pace of a volleyball match once the other team gains the momentum.

"Volleyball isn't like basketball, where a team can immediately adjust their game by changing defenses or the speed at which they bring the ball up the court," he said. "It's very difficult to change tempos, and we tried to do that against the Aztecs and failed."

"I guess it's games like this, when there isn't a clear-cut explanation of why we lost, that make coaching volleyball interesting."

Soccer team beats Chico State in overtime, 2-0

By Len Gutman
Daily staff writer

The Spartan soccer team knocked off Chico State, 2-0, in overtime Wednesday night in Chico.

The winning goal for the Spartans (3-3-3) came seven minutes into the first 10-minute overtime period on a long, hard shot by midfielder John Paul Vandersluys.

Then with seven minutes left in the second overtime session, forward Allen Picchi had a breakaway opportunity and was fouled in the penalty area. Sweeper Nick Rotteveel scored on the ensuing penalty kick to ice the victory.

"The guys really wanted to win," SJSU soccer coach Julie Menendez said. "We feel now that we're really starting to put it together."

Menendez said the game was a hard-played contest and that Chico State (6-5) played very well.

"Chico was coming off of a couple of wins and they were feeling pretty good about how they've been playing in the last few games," Menendez said.

The Spartans had 14 shots on goal, and goalkeeper Joe Gangale had six saves, but Menendez said mid-

Defense leads the way in shutout win fielder Rich Rollins had a great game.

"I thought Rich Rollins played the best game he's ever played," Menendez said. "Even the linesman, who'd seen Rich play several times before, made a comment that that's the best he's ever seen him play."

Menendez said Rollins was in the game all of the time and moved consistently, winning all the head balls and playing a major role in the victory.

Menendez also said the defense played well.

"We kept 'em out of the net for 110 minutes," Menendez explained. "Rotteveel played a steady game at sweeper."

Things don't get easy for the Spartans this weekend.

They travel south to play Santa Barbara (5-4-3) today and Irvine (3-7) Sunday. Both are PCAA contests.

Menendez said both teams should be tough, especially playing at home, but that Santa Barbara will be the toughest of the two.

"Santa Barbara's been in some good games. The games they've lost have not been that decisive," he said.

Irvine is just coming off a five-game losing streak, which they broke recently with a win over UC San Diego, 1-0.

The Spartans are 1-1 in the PCAA and in a second-place tie with UNLV, which beat SJSU, 4-0, this season. Fresno State is undefeated in league play and in first place.

The Spartans play Fresno State later in the season at Fresno.

"Fresno right now is in the driver's seat, but we have yet to play them," Menendez said.

Art Department holds lecture on sculptor Nevelson's work

By Sue Kiyabu
Daily staff writer

The Art Department threw a party Tuesday night. But, it always throws a party on Tuesdays.

"Tuesday nights are like Friday nights around here," said Andy Ostheimer, the department's exhibition and special project coordinator.

There were three student receptions and a speaker, Erica Vegter-Kubic, who discussed the art of sculptor Louise Nevelson.

Vegter-Kubic spoke to approximately 45 students in Room 133 of the Art Building about Nevelson's art. The lecture was termed "impromptu" by Vegter-Kubic, whose husband was originally slated to give the lecture on the sculptor.

"She is perhaps the most famous woman sculptor alive today," Ostheimer said about Nevelson.

Most recently Nevelson signed a contract with San Jose's Koll Company to sculpt a piece which is now in the lobby of the building on First Street. Nevelson is also responsible for the sculpture in the center of the Embarcadero Center in San Francisco.

The lecture was made in conjunction with a lecture on Nevelson's art which will take place 7 p.m. Wednesday at the San Jose Museum of Art.

Nevelson is famous for the use of highlight and shadows in her works. She was born in 1899 and has the attitude of a modern woman, Vegter-Kubic said. She studied with Diego Rivera, the world-renowned muralist.

For half of the lecture, Vegter-Kubic showed slides, for the other half a film was shown which showed the sculptor working. Nevelson is an artist who wears false sable eyelashes and said in the film her art can be equaled to giving birth.

"It's like having psychic labor pains," Nevelson said in the film. "I don't think it can be avoided."

After the lecture most of the students went to see the shows of their peers. Refreshments were offered at the receptions and each artist was present to answer questions and speak about their works of art.

All of the receptions were for shows which will run until today.

On the third floor of the building in Gallery 8, Jason Challas had his show titled, "See, Speak, Hear, No Evil."

The show features a microphone and electronics gadgets for art lovers to rattle and touch on one side of the room. Mounted on the wall, Challas has likenesses of news commentators made up like an acrylic story board with scenes such as the Space Shuttle exploding.

On the first floor in Gallery 3, Cynthia Kurtz's works were displayed in her show called a series of computer images.

Kurtz's art had computerized images shown on a screen, like a slide show, and people gathered around the screen observing the show.

"I really liked her show," said Ryan Henderson, a student who hasn't declared his major. "The use of color was really effective."

Hannalene Rogeberg and Marcos Gaitan's show couldn't have been further from the computerized genre.

Both artists have large paintings mounted on the walls of Gallery 5. The artists painted predominantly human forms.

"I really like the way she (Rogeberg) draws, you can see that talent in her paintings," said Jennifer Moore, a graphics art major.

Ostheimer emphasized the different genres the artists work in and said students should come to view the works. There are different shows set up every week but student receptions are always on Tuesdays.

"There really is a lot of energy in the building on Tuesdays," Ostheimer said.

Pay hike handed to program board

He added that the program board morale was low in the beginning of the semester because the members felt neglected and forgotten.

"I don't think it's inappropriate that there be a difference in stipends between A.S. board members and program board members in theory," Boothe said.

However, Boothe said he was not against the approval for the program board's pay raise.

Alexander said she thought stipends should have remained the same for all.

"All of a sudden because they got more money, they were voting on their own stipends," she said. "I don't think that should have happened."

Ted Gehrke, program board adviser, said he was pleased that the members received a raise.

"Stipends are really important," Gehrke said. "For all the time spent working, this is a tiny reward. It's something to look forward to and to help with school."

Kevin Boles, program board classical arts chairman, said the news of the raise was a pleasant surprise.

"This is the type of job that you put in lots of hours," he said. "You don't do it for money, so it's nice to get a reimbursement."

adding that the groups tend to make demands on the board of trustees rather than work with them.

"It's impossible to represent their views if they're not organized enough when they present them to us," she said.

Because of a split among board members, CSSA took a neutral stand when meeting with the board of trustees on the admission requirements. The split was the result of discord among members of the board who were more sympathetic to minority issues, Johnson said.

When the Third World representatives went before the board, they presented demands rather than the views of minorities, making CSSA appear to oppose the requirements, Johnson said.

"It looks bad politically when we are forced to take a neutral stand and then later come back and appear to oppose legislation," she said.

prejudice out there," Stein said while explaining why several events like campus barbecues and car washes failed to generate revenue.

But the board didn't accept Stein's explanation and voted instead to help GALA restructure a repayment schedule.

"We don't want your group to have a bad credit rating," said Nandor Krause, A.S. director of students rights and responsibilities, in explaining the board's decision. Future A.S. boards would hesitate to lend money to GALA if the board allows the debt to go unpaid, he added.

Daniel Larke, A.S. director of community affairs, said he would work with GALA leaders to work out a payment schedule acceptable to the board. He also volunteered to help the group come up with fund-raising ideas.

"We'll get it taken care of,"

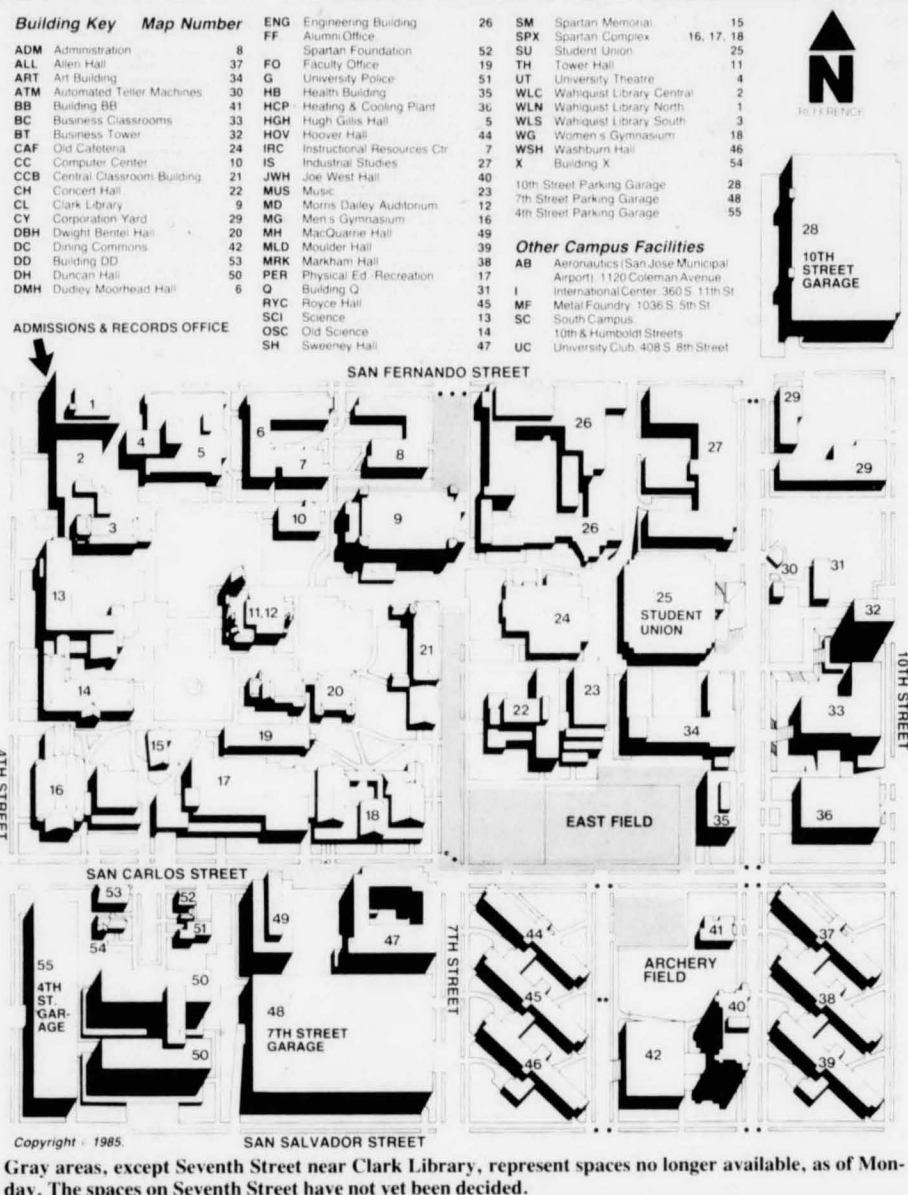

Larke said.

GALA has suffered hard times since 1983 because it's had trouble securing A.S. funds, Stein said.

The A.S. denied GALA funding from the general budget in 1984 when the group asked for $800 for Gay Awareness Day, Stein said. The budget committee voted to drop GALA because an A.S. bylaw made ineligible any organization that owed money, he added.

After the bylaw was repealed later in the year, the A.S. supplied GALA with $340 to print gay-awareness pamphlets but has denied the group funding since, Stein said.

Stein said he considered litigation against the A.S. but decided it would be "too messy."

Construction crowds campus parking

Library will remain open throughout the construction.

Although the lot between the Engineering and Administration buildings will be fenced off Monday, heavy construction won't begin for two or three weeks, said Pluta.

"A lot of utility work needs to be done first," she said. "It wouldn't be cost-effective for them to come in three different times and extend the fences (as the work progresses)."

Three of the disabled parking sites adjacent to the Engineering Building will remain open after work begins, but the other 13 will be lost, as will 35 spaces for administration officials, Pluta said.

Marty Schuler, SJSU director of Disabled Student Services, said he is waiting for word from the president's office about relocation of some disabled parking spaces.

Schuler said he was told by Dan Buerger, executive assistant to the president, that the lot in front of the athletic ticket office might be changed from employee parking to disabled parking.

"Some facts about the S.J.S.U. population may surprise you . . ."

- Myth: The average college student is 18 to 20 years old.
Fact: Sixty-five percent of San Jose State University students are over 21 years old. Most are between 20 and 24 years of age.
- Myth: College students can't afford to go out very often.
Fact: Seventy percent of San Jose State students and faculty go out for entertainment at least once a week.
- Myth: Most college students live on or near campus.
Fact: Of the 28,000 students and faculty attending San Jose State, less than 27% live within a mile of campus. The majority live off-campus and commute daily to San Jose State.
